

NOTES ON THE BOSTON BOOK TRADE.

The Boston Book Trade is "quiet." Nov. 7, 1866. The elections are over, it is believed that this business will soon become brisk, as the Republicans, having saved the country, are about to take their seats, and the Democrats, having lost the day, need "the consolations of philosophy" and the soothing influence of literature.

I have just returned from visiting round the circle of our book-stores. Here are the notes I made by the way: Ticknor & Fields will publish on Saturday "The Vision of Sir Launfal" by James Russell Lowell, and a new edition, in three volumes, of the prose writings of Mr. Longfellow. The second series of "The Biglow Papers" is selling well, and so is Bayard Taylor's "Picture of St. John." Whittier's "Snow-Bound" enjoys a greater popularity than any other of his poetical books. "Griffith Gaunt" has sold about 15,000.

The circulation of "The North American" is 2,000; of "Every Saturday," 15,000; of "The Atlantic," 50,000, and of "The Home Monthly," 100,000. Crosby & Aldrich publish this morning a new French Grammar by Edward H. Magill, A. M., Sub-Master in the Boston Latin School. It bears high testimonials from eminent teachers of New-England, and is a translation of the French Grammar of the late M. de la Harpe, and they will publish within a week a Latin Primer by Henry E. Sawyer, A. M., Principal of the High School of Middletown, Connecticut.

Walker, Putnam & Co. have in press "A Child's Book of Geography" by H. F. Johnson, of New-York. J. E. Faxon & Co. have in press "Outpost," a novel, by J. G. Austin, author of "Dora Darling, or The Daughter of the Regiment." A new and interesting active preparation ("Singing Round the Circle," by Chaplain Neebly, P. M. of the Confederate X Road, with illustrations by Thomas Nast.

Oliver Optic has a new novel—not a juvenile—nearly ready for publication. It is a story of the times that "Martinez, or Anderson's Prisoner," by a nephew of ex-Vice-President Hamilton, is having a large sale, although it is not the first book that is so successful. "The Vision of Sir Launfal" by James Russell Lowell, by the author of "Margaret and her Brethren," in Loring's circulating library, "Felix Holt" and "Broken to Harness" prove to be the most popular books of the year.

There is a book for boys. "The Little White Old Man," a Christmas story, and other tales, by Elizabeth A. Thurston, author of "Mosses." E. P. Dutton & Co. have in press, "Whittier as a Poet," an interesting and valuable history of our Church and her services," has sold an edition, and a people's edition is nearly ready. This firm have a dozen or more juveniles in press.
